HILTS-WILLARD, SINCE 1878

Founded in Gloversville, New York, where the American glove industry began in the late 1700's, Hilts-Willard continues to use the tradecraft first brought to America by master glovers from England and France.

The gloving process is almost unchanged from those earliest days, because the soft and stretchable glove leather of fine gloves cannot be processed by automation.

Unlike processing shoe or garment leather which has no stretch, each gloving skin is first dampened and then pulled and set to length, assuring that stretch will be across the hand for fit and comfort.

Then each hand is individually cut into a "trank" or rectangular blank that has further been stretched and measured for each size assuring consistent fit. These are then cut to shape with a die.

Each pair is sewn individually by hand or individually by machines that have changed little since our founding in 1878 although the old foot treadles have been replaced by electric motors.

And before packing, each pair is pulled onto a properly sized, heated steel hand to give finished shape and to assure proper sizing.

Styles in the preceding pages represent more than a century of experience in glove design and craftsmanship. The company motto from 1878 still applies:

"LIKE OLD FRIENDS, THEY WEAR WELL"

ELLERY

The classic men's glove, so well styled and functional, hasn't changed in generations and was first made by Hilts-Willard in the 1890's. Abyssinian lambskin, was first imported through Boston in the late 1700's, and still makes the very best lambskin leather. The lambs are raised by families for meat in villages across the Ethiopian plateau. The high elevation (over 8000 feet) has imparted an unusually fine grain surface and strength unequalled by any other leather. Ellery is sewn throughout with neat, lockstitch construction enhanced by hand sewn hems and trim. The seamless knit lining is 50% cashmere for softness and warmth and 50% wool for non-pilling structure and durability. Ellery is an essential in any man's wardrobe.

Available in Black, Brown, Tan & Black with trims in color Tan

ADAM

Native American whitetail deerskin is tanned in Gloversville, NY by an ecological process handed down through generations of skilled tanners. Deerskin's hollow fiber construction provides natural warmth to supplement the cashmere and wool seamless knitted lining. 50% cashmere provides softness and warmth and 50% wool provides non-pilling structure and durability. Hand stitched back, hem and fashion detail with machine stitched palm for durability. Table cut by hand for lasting, perfect fit.

Available in Black, Brown & Tan

CHESTER

Naturally warm hollow fibered North American whitetail deerskin is fully lined with 50% cashmere for softness and warmth and 50% wool for non-pilling structure and durability. Double thick lining extends over the wrist to keep out wind and snow. Table cut by hand for lasting perfect fit.

Available in Black, Brown & Tan

COOPER

COOPER'S unique "3 in 1" system allows its components to be worn separately or together, depending on the weather. The outer shell of butter soft native deerskin, worn alone, is perfect for just above freezing days. The inner knitted glove of 100% wool with lightweight sheepskin leather palm, worn alone, is warm and comfortable for driving or a long walk. When both gloves are combined COOPER becomes our warmest offering for the coldest days.

Available in Black, Brown & Saddle

BOONE

Supple deerskin suede paired with deep Sherpa style pile linings make this our most comfortable and durable glove. Deerskin's natural hollow fibers provide extra insulation from the cold. Boone is rugged enough for country wear but also at home in the city.

Available in Black, Brown & Tan

WHALER

WHALER features Gunn Cut construction and seamless fingers that were traditionally used in roping. It has super strong Ramskin leather. Oil Tanned to resist the elements. Light fleece liner to maintain body warmth without bulk.

Available in Brown

OUTDOORMAN

Outdoorsman's unique "3 in 1" system allows its components to be worn separately or together, depending on the weather. The outer shell of super strong Ramskin leather is oil tanned to resist the elements and the combination of Calfskin leather on the back makes it great for outdoor activities. The glove is lined with light fleece to maintain body warmth without bulk and perfect for just above freezing days. The inner knitted glove of 100% wool, worn alone, is warm and comfortable for driving or a long walk. When both gloves are combined Outdoorsman becomes our warmest offering for the coldest days.

Available only in Brown & Tan combination
